

Potential financial shortfalls may force state agencies and institutions of higher education to consider staffing changes, temporary or permanent, to alleviate budget pressure. There are many options for reducing personal services costs. In order to avoid losing valuable talent and the severe effect on employee morale, layoffs should be the last solution for consideration.

It is critical that Human Resources, budget staff, and leadership work together to understand the full scope (e.g. timing, funding source, statutory obligations) of the shortfall, then choose a mitigation plan that will minimize impact on staff while continuing to provide critical services to the residents of Colorado. It's highly advised that an agency consult with the Attorney General's Office before pursuing any action. This document outlines the most common staffing-related budget reduction options that may be available to leadership for reducing labor costs and filling budget short falls.
